Open Science vs Commodification of Academic Research?

A question

 Is the Open Science (OS) able to oppose the expansion of commodification of scientific and academic research?

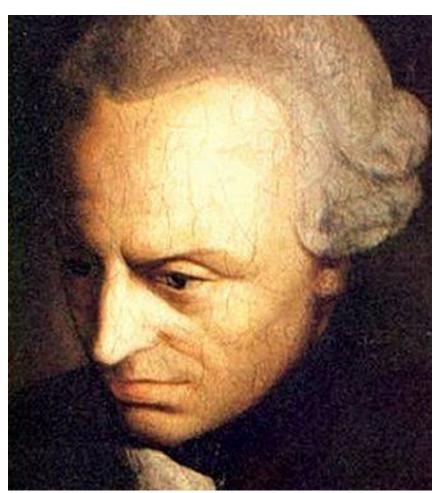

Outline

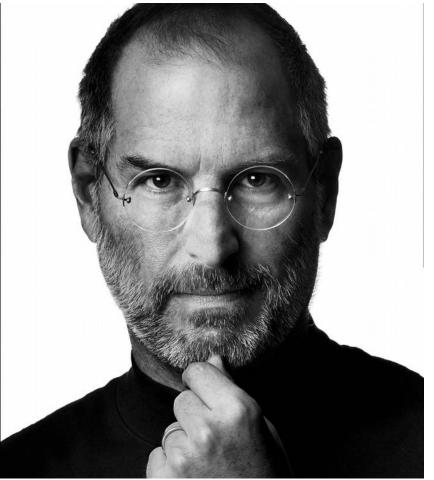

1. We had a dream

2. The realty

3. A new hope

A dream

Open Standard (OAI-PMH)

Institutional repositories (Green Road)

Gold OA not for profit

Berlin declaration 2003

2. A complete version of the work and all supplemental materials, including a copy of the permission as stated above, in an appropriate standard electronic format is deposited (and thus published) in at least one online repository using suitable technical standards (such as the Open Archive definitions) that is supported and maintained by an academic institution, scholarly society, government agency, or other well-established organization that seeks to enable open access, unrestricted distribution, inter operability, and long-term archiving.

The reality

Hybrid OA (Springer, Elsevier etc.),
 Gold for profit

 Scientific social networking; commercial disciplinary repository

Commercial search engines

Commodification

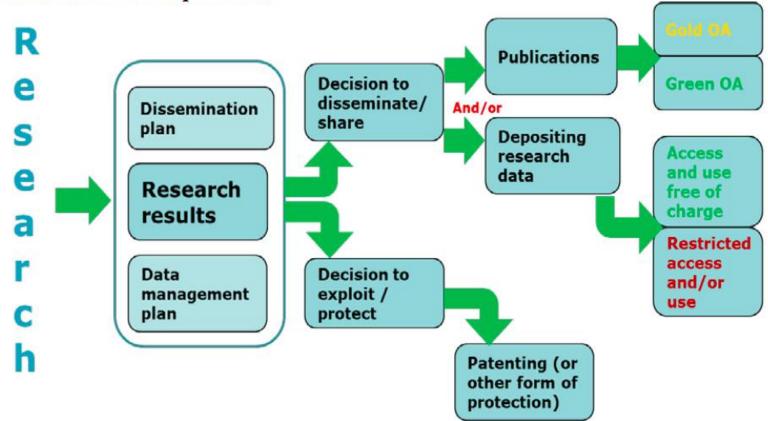

Citation as price

Publication as product

Scientist as entrepreneur, science as competition

Schizophrenic policy

out Aisa

is a non-profit organization that undertakes to advance open access to knowledge.

mission of AISA is to:

- . disseminate a culture of Open Science;
- . publish studies on the implementation of Open Science principles
- . provide staff training programs to promote Open Science practices in research performing organizations (universities and research centres) which have embraced the OA principles;
- . engage international cooperation through networking with legal entities involved in the promotion of Open Science;
- . promote participation in international research projects and grant applications linked to the association's mission;
- . raise awareness among decision makers, and in particular Italian and European legislators, to further the promotion of Open Science in research assessment and intellectual property policies.
