

Open Research Data and Open Science

Francesca Tomasi

Francesca Tomasi is assistant professor in Digital humanities in the Department of Classical Philology and Italian Studies at the University of Bologna.

Her research is mostly devoted to digital collections semantic enhancement in the cultural heritage domain, with a special attention to historical archives, and with a focus on metadata, controlled vocabularies and formal ontologies.

She is member of different scientific committees of both associations (among them, she is vicepresident of AIUCD, the Italian Association on Digital Humanities) and journals (e.g. "Griseldaonline", "Schede umanistiche", "Bibliothecae.it"). She is also President of the BDU (Biblioteca di Discipline Umanistiche), the library of the School of Humanities in the University of Bologna.

She attended a lot of conferences in the digital humanities domain as both invited lecturer and speaker in international meeting (among them: DocEng, TEI, IRCDL, DH, TPD).

She wrote several papers, mostly in peer-review journal. She is editor of the digital collection of Vespasiano da Bisticci, Letters (<http://vespasianodabisticciletters.unibo.it>) and author of some books.

Between the most recent: with D. Fiormonte, e T. Numerico, The Digital Humanist. A Critical Inquiry, Punctum Books, New York 2015